Galveston.

Galveston. filed in the United States district court yesterday atternoon. The libellants are the Galveston Steamship and Lighter company, managed by Irvine & Bressner, and James McDonald, managing owner of the steamer Mamie Higgins. They allege that it was through the aid and instrumentality of the vessels owned and operated by them that the steamer was extracted from a perilous position on Bolivar beach. The value of the steamship and cargo is set down at $800,000, and the libellants ask for a reasonable and just salvage and compensation in proportion to the value of the steamer and cargo. The vessel, as stated yesterday, was bonded and sailed for New York during the afternoon.
